Ebsco Search Tips

- 1. Access all library databases from the library's website.
 - a. From home page to quickly search 5 most popular Ebsco databases
 - b. From A to Z Databases page to see other databases for more specialized searching
 - c. From Research and Article Databases page
- 2. From off-campus, you will need to authenticate using your Erikson userID and password, which is the same you use for your Erikson Web Mail. It is NOT the same password as my.erikson or EriksonOnline
- 3. Default Search screen looks like this:

Abstract:	In any society, parenting beliefs are a reflection of that society's cultural values and traditions (J. U. Ogbu, 1981). Verbosity, a parenting behavior considered dysfunctional in European American culture, may not be problematic in Chinese culture. The authors recruited 31 Chinese American and 30 European American mothers and used questionnaires to measure parenting behaviors and child behavior problems. The Chinese American mothers also completed a questionnaire assessing their acculturation level. The Chinese American mothers had higher levels of verbosity than did the European American mothers ; however, there were no differences between the groups in child behavior problems. The results also revealed higher levels of laxness in the Chinese American mothers . Acculturation level did not predict verbosity or laxness levels. Results suggest that the effectiveness of a parenting style should be defined relative to cultural context. [ABSTRACT FROM AUTHOR]
