Bring your vision to life as an early childhood leader with an Early Childhood Leadership & Advocacy Certificate

Erikson Institute is introducing a new certificate program for Early Childhood Leadership and Advocacy. Students will develop strong skills in management, working with adults, policy influence, and advocacy to position themselves as an effective and visionary early childhood leader. Once completed, students can take their leadership and advocacy skills to a variety of settings that allow them to advocate for the policies that are in the best interest of young children and their families.

With over 50 years of childhood development and childhood education knowledge and expertise, Erikson’s curriculum will help students grow their skills and knowledge in this important field. This online certificate program is designed for candidates who have completed a bachelor’s degree, currently work with children and families, and want to develop expertise in leadership and advocacy for professional advancement. Strong candidates for this program may be working in early education, after-school care and libraries; museums, childcare resource and referral agencies; and child and family support services.

Career Opportunities
Graduates of our Early Childhood Leadership and Advocacy Certificate program will be prepared to work with career titles such as: early childhood education teacher; center or program director; educational coordinator; parent coordinator; or, home-based child care business owner.
